TAKING A FAMILY BACK TO THE SOIL.

Being the Experiences of a Government Clerk Who Sets Out to Lower the High Cost of Living.

This chicken business has me guessing. If the thing is as profitable as they say it is, I can't understand why John D. Rockefeller doesn't sell out all his other interests and go in for hens. He'd have all the money in the world in a year or two.

Those old bonanza kings back in the days of the Comstock lode were miserable little pikers alongside what the proprietor of a modern chicken farm must be according to the figures. Just listen to this poultry farm in New Jersey, where there are several thousand hens, claims a net profit of $6.45 a year per hen. The fact that the claim is made for the purpose of inducing people to pay high prices for breeding stock and eggs for hatching might tend to discount it, but the owner backs up his statement from a firm of certified accountants which has audited the books and attests to the correctness of the figures. Another concern, which sells incubators and other supplies, declares a man can make a good living by keeping a few hens on a city lot, and offers to tell you how in a book which costs a dollar. If that is true, on eight acres I ought to make at least as much as the President of the United States.

Laws of Trade Upset.

All the laws of supply and demand, which govern other lines of trade and industry, appear to have been abrogated in the case of chickens. Shrewd business men are putting their money into investments which net them 4 and 5 per cent, and industrials which give promise of Culp-Goodson Recital.

No recital given in Washington this season has seemed to give more delight to an audience throughout than that of Mme. Julia Culp, the great Dutch lieder-singer, and Katharine Goodson, the eminent English pianist, at the New National Theater yesterday afternoon. Although the long program required until nearly 7 o'clock to present, there were insistent demands time and again for encores, which were graciously given by both artists.

Mme. Culp, whose beautiful voice and wonderful art enables her to give a new soul to even the simplest household ballad, sang a number of songs, including "Schubert's songs, including 'Heimliche Lieben,' 'Des Fischer's Liebeslied,' 'Die Flore,' and 'Du bist die Ruh,' and a group of Hugo Wolf songs, including 'In dem schatten meiner Leiden,' and 'Mausfallen-spruechelein.' Seemed to give such pleasure that the latter was sung a second time, and the whole group. But it was in the quartet of English songs that Mme. Culp seemed to rouse intense enthusiasm. 'All Through the Night,' by W. G. MacFadden, 'Away,' 'Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes,' and 'I've Been Roaming,' sung pure English without the semblance of an accent, and with such enthusiasm to Mme. Culp's admirers and to present her in an entirely new light.

The pronounced ovation, however, was reserved for the last song, 'Goodbye,' a stranger to many doubtless, but one who quickly won her way to high admiration by the beauty of her voice and the technique of her work. Mozart's Sonata in A major immediately commanded attention, and her series of five Chopin numbers aroused greater enthusiasm, especially the study in C major, No. 7, op. 10, the value in A flat, op. 34, and the 'Nocturne' in E flat, op. 9, No. 3, which rank in the world, but none as Miss Culp. It seemed a revelation and the applause which followed compelled an encore, the Schumann 'Nachtschmerz.' Her final group, Rubinstein's 'Barcarolle,' 'The King of the Fishes,' and 'The King of the Fishes,' offered further proof of Miss Goodson's beautiful artistry.

Mme. Culp recognized the exceptional gifts of the accompanist by presenting Mr. Bos for a share in the applause.

"Pleasure Seekers."

"The Pleasure Seekers" comes to the Belasco Theater for the week commencing Monday night, with matinees Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The big production at the Winter Garden in New York is brought intact to this city. The performance is called "a trip around the world in a whirl of laughter." The story relates the adventures of two drummers who, with a gathering of clothing salesmen, tour the world and inadvertently become entangled in a series of adventures. The story is set in St. Moritz with the stage a sea of ice, on which the drummers, Bobby and Harry Cooper, Hugh Cameron, Clay Smith, Harry Cooper, Virginia Evans, Myrtle Gilbert, Flo May, Sally Evans and Montgomery and Moore.

"Maid of Athens."

Henry W. Savage's Viennese operetta "Maid of Athens" comes to the National next week.

It is the first work in collaboration of Franz Lehár and Victor Lennox, the composer and librettist, respectively, of the "Merry Widow," since they wrote that record-breaking success, and as a consequence Mr. Savage's new operetta, "Maid of Athens," in Europe it has been known as "The King of the Fishes." Mr. Savage originally intended to retain that title in America, but in order to convey more distinctly the idea of the operetta, he changed it to the name by which it will be known here.

There are nineteen musical numbers, three massive and exceedingly costly sets of scenery, more than 1,000 costumes, a company of nearly 100 and an orchestra of thirty-seven.

"Nearly Married."

Mr. Edgar Selwyn's farce "Nearly Married," under direction of Coahan and Belasco.

Even the storm which wrecked the theatrical calculations Monday and hurled the company to such an extent that it could not reach here on time could not rob the delightful little Scotch comedy, "Buntz Pulls the Strings," of the warmth and beauty of its homelike atmosphere. The comedy, which it again received last night at the Belasco Theater. The little play is not a stranger to Washington, but the enthusiasm and genuine enjoyment shown by last night's audience is ample evidence that it is not a guest which has worn out its welcome. An idyl of Scotch home life, wholesome, sweet, natural and delightful in its every phase, it re-established itself in the esteem of its friends and made many new admirers.

Miss Mollie Pearson, who has come to be so identified with her role of Buntz Bigger, the girl who never fails to extricate her family and friends from the most trying of domestic situations, is still with the company. Her charming life, as to become known as "Buntz" Pearson, is still with the company. Her charming life, as to become known as "Buntz" Pearson, is still with the company.

Charles Kenyon's drama, "Kindling," a play based upon the all-sacrificing impulse of maternal instincts, will be repeated next week by the Toll Players. "Kindling" was produced three years ago as a starring vehicle for Margaret Blinington.

The story is of a mother who steals to provide clothing for her expected child. At first she stole only trifles; then, inflamed by an overpowering impulse, she steals a valuable jewelry, which she plans to pawn for enough money to take her husband and herself to the west, where her baby will have "a chance for life."

Miss Frances Nelson, Dell Hayes, Charles Nelson, and the Toll Players, who have been seen in the big opposite role.

"Madame, Who Are You?"

Jake Goldenberg will present the two-act musical burlesque built on musical comedy lines, "Madame, Who Are You?" at the Gayety Theater next week, with the mechanical and electrical devices. Will Fox and Harry Marks Stewart, in character roles, are the leading funmakers, while James J. Lake acts as a foil for their humor as the department store manager. Hearty Lofgren, a former floorwalker and Rose De Young, a pert young stenographer, Harry Von Tilzer wrote the music of the play and Jack Mason staged the dancing numbers.

Carol Schroeder has the title role, that of a mysterious woman who succeeds in making trouble for the comedians. Eddie Nelson assists the comedy principals, while Carrie and Dorothy Raymond give several vaudeville specialties. A chorus of more than twenty introduces the many musical numbers.

"Antony and Cleopatra" Sunday.

Owing to an unexpected shifting in dates, made necessary by the storm, overhauling prearranged schedules, Manager Berger announces that the wonderful Kleines-Klein photo drama film, "Antony and Cleopatra," will return to the Columbia Theater next Sunday for two exhibitions—in the afternoon at 3 and in the evening at 8:15 o'clock.

Gertrude Hoffman.

B. F. Keith's Theater next week will present Gertrude Hoffman and company in a big scenic and musical creation in twelve scenes. Miss Hoffman interpolates interpretative dances, imitations of new and old stage favorites and travesties on popular plays. Miss Hoffman's latest, "The Sixties," with folk songs and patriotic ballads. Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle will be seen in motion pictures of "The Castle Walk" and other terpsichorean figures. Other acts include the Harvard-Madison company in the big masque comedy "The Devil Outwitted"; John and Winnie Hennings, as the "Kill Kare Koup"; Edgar, Benson, flexible wonder; the Fathe weekly review, the pipe organ recitals and the dancing.

Garden.

The sixth series of the Adventures of Kathlyn, entitled "Three Bags of Silver," will be shown at Moore's Orpheum Theater next Monday and Tuesday. It shows Kathlyn and her party continuing their way to the coast, after repulsing Umallah and his men. Wednesday and Thursday will be seen the funny film feature "Trading with the Enemy," a travesty "From Preside to Footlights," the newest creation of the Eclair studio of Paris, will be shown Friday and Saturday. Appropriate music will be rendered by the Garden Orchestra.

Orpheum.

"Little Mary" Pickford in "The Good Little Devil" will be exclusively featured the entire week at Moore's Orpheum Theater. It was as the blind girl Juliette that Miss Pickford gained her laurels on the stage, and she enacts the same character in the film production. The play has been adapted and staged by David Belasco for the famous Players' Company in collaboration with Daniel Frohman, and many of the original cast are now in the cast. These films are now in their third week in New York. A special musical score arranged by Mr. Theodore Bendix of the Metropolitan Opera House will be rendered by the Orpheum orchestra.

"Three Musketeers" in Films.

At the New National Theater Sunday a film version of Alexandre Dumas' "The Three Musketeers," in six parts and encompassing 728 scenes, will be shown. The thrilling adventures of the dashing D'Artagnan and his friends will be displayed for the first time on the screen. Two performances will be given—one at 2 p. m. and the other at 8:15.

Elmendorf Tomorrow.

At the New National Theater tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock "Western India" will be the subject of an illustrated lecture by Dwight Elmendorf. Bombay—the real native Bombay—with its mosques, temples, shrines, its famous "Towers of Silence" and its ceaseless roar of Asiatic life, southern in dress like a European crowd—will be shown with a kaleidoscope of moving color. The greater portion of the lecture will deal with the
